Exam Proctoring

All online exams require a proctor. For someone to serve as your proctor, they must meet the definition of a disinterested third-party as defined below.

Disinterested Third-Party: Someone with no direct business or family relationship to the participant. A disinterested party must have no financial interest in your success or failure. A disinterested party will be someone who is not concerned with the outcome of your exam.

Examples of proctors who DO NOT qualify: Anyone within your same organization who is a coworker, teammate or manager; friends; family members.

Examples of proctors who qualify: Official testing centers at colleges and universities, other learning centers like Sylvan, online proctoring services like MonitorEDU, or someone in a dedicated HR or training department role within your agency.

For example, an agency principal, a supervisor, a subordinate, a friend, or family member would NOT qualify as a disinterested third party. Disinterested third-party proctors are available in many locations. The quickest way to locate a proctor in your area is to conduct a Google search for "approved proctors near me." Some examples of a disinterested third party are: a coworker who exclusively works in a training/HR role or a local proctoring facility/testing center. Many libraries and colleges also offer proctoring services.

The National Alliance allows MonitorEDU as a virtual proctoring option. You can learn more and access their service at <https://scicproctor.com/how-it-works> at any time. You do not have to have an appointment. After you pay the small service fee, you may connect to a proctor on demand

As a student, you should never launch your exam without a proctor present. The time will begin and you will lose your exam attempt if your proctor is not present. For more information on proctors or to watch instructional videos, please visit <https://www.scic.com/proctor-monitor-rules/>
